STYLES WITH HERITAGE

These special garments derive inspiration from the Pendleton archives in pattern, style, and design. From our earliest women's "sporting coats" to sweaters worn by today's influencers and celebrities, these pieces embody classic American style.

HARDING

A pattern through time — commissioned by local tribes as a tribute to First Lady Florence Harding, this pattern has been in the Pendleton blanket line continuously since the 1920s.

BENEFITS OF WOOL

There's More to Wool Than Warmth

SUSTAINABLE
& RENEWABLE

In a time of environmental consciousness, this biodegradable and renewable resource remains longer-lasting and better looking than synthetic fabrics.

RESILIENT &
WRINKLE-RESISTANT

The unique characteristics of the individual wool fibers give fabrics the ability to hold a shape, resist wrinkles and withstand wear. This makes wool great for travel. Wool can be stretched or twisted and its cells return to their original position.

NATURALLY
COMFORTABLE

Wool fibers spring back to shape keeping their open, porous nature. Wool provides the most warmth with the least weight. The air trapped inside (about 80% of wool fabric volume) makes wool an excellent insulator. Wool is nature's original outdoor "performance" fiber.

FLAME
RESISTANT

Unless it is in direct contact with flame, wool will extinguish itself. The denser the weave and the greater the fabric weight, the less likely it is to char because of its smaller oxygen content. Fire departments recommend the use of wool blankets, rugs or coats to put out flames.

LUSTROUS &
FADE RESISTANT

Wool has a permanent natural luster it never loses, even after years of hard wear. It absorbs dyes until it is completely saturated so colors stay brilliant. No other fiber can be spun or woven into such a variety of weights, textures, finishes and colors.

WATER & STAIN
REPELLENT

Wool repels light water, like a rain shower, because of the membrane on the outer scales. In very wet conditions, wool can absorb up to 30% of its own weight without feeling damp. And because of insulation ability, wool "breathes," allowing the body's natural moisture to pass through.

BORN IN OREGON

PENDLETON: THE ORIGINAL OREGON MAKER

When master weaver Thomas Kay left England to seek new opportunities, he brought a passion for innovation and exploration to the Oregon territories in 1863. Kay established several mills in Oregon, and laid the foundation for the weaving legacy that would be carried on by his daughter, Fannie Kay Bishop, when she encouraged her sons to establish Pendleton Woolen Mills in 1909. Six generations later Thomas Kay's descendants are continuing this legacy, which remains a family-owned and managed business: Pendleton Woolen Mills. Our Northwest mills continue the tradition of quality, innovation and industry.

PENDLETON MILL IN PENDLETON, OREGON

PENDLETON MILL IN WASHOUGAL, WASHINGTON

In 1909, financed by the local community and the Bishop family, Fannie Kay and her sons rebuilt a defunct mill in Pendleton, Oregon. By autumn, the mill was selling colorful jacquard blankets to the nearby Native Americans (Cayuse, Umatilla, and Walla Walla), laying a business foundation that continues to this day.

The Pendleton, Oregon mill still weaves colorful jacquard blankets and fabrics in signature geometric patterns for use in blankets, apparel and accessories. Blankets are then sent to the mill in Washougal, Washington for finishing.

In 1912, Pendleton Woolen Mills acquired a mill in Washougal, Washington, at the gateway to the Columbia River, along the original route of the Lewis & Clark expedition. This allowed for an expanded range of fabrics—plaids, solids, stripes—woven on dobby looms.

The Washougal, Washington mill still weaves plaids, solids and stripes. This mill also cleans, cards, spins, and dyes wool, and finishes all blankets from both mills.
